Sridavi,

Regarding the pictures, they have not been removed. There are literally hundreds of posts, which leads me to infer that you didn't even bother looking.

Dear Mr. Greenspan:

Thank you for your email. Namecheap does not collect or retain the information you have listed in the subpoena. So, unfortunately, there is nothing that can be produced.

Please note that we are not a Copyright Agent in law or in fact. Under the DMCA, we provide contact information so that a compliant DMCA Takedown Order may be directed to us and we then serve it on the party alleged to be infringing. The DMCA provides strict guidelines on what must be included and only provides for the removal of content. You may find additional information here.

Your own website states that you do, in fact, collect and retain the information we have listed in the subpoena. See attached and below:

"Using the Raw Access Logs menu in cPanel, you can check the traffic coming to your website before it is turned into a report by the statistics software. It is a great functionality to take a closer look at the type of requests your websites are getting..."

"If you wish to download archived logs which are stored in the account home directory, click on the corresponding one in the Archived Raw Logs section..."

Comply with the subpoena or I will put this matter before a judge.

How can I check my website access logs?

Using the Raw Access Logs menu in cPanel, you can check the traffic coming to your website before it is turned into a report by the statistics software. It is a great functionality to take a closer look at the type of the requests your websites are getting.

You can access it in the following way:

for cPanel paper_lantern theme

for cPanel x3 theme

for cPanel paper_lantern theme:

Log into your cPanel > Metrics section > Raw Access menu:

In the Configure Logs section, you can set up cPanel to automatically archive and remove the logs.

Make the necessary changes and click on Save to apply them:

A screenshot of the "Raw Access" configuration page. At the top left is a navigation icon with three horizontal lines and a gear. The title "Raw Access" is centered above a text area. The text explains that Raw Access Logs allow you to see who has visited your website without displaying graphs, charts, or other graphics. It can be used to download a zipped version of the server's access log for your site. Below this is a section titled "Configure Logs" with two checkboxes: "Archive logs in your home directory at the end of each stats run every 24 hours." and "Remove the previous month's archived logs from your home directory at the end of each month.". At the bottom left are two buttons: "Save" (with a checkmark icon) and "Cancel".

The Download Current Raw Access Logs option allows downloading the corresponding log for certain domain(-s):

- Domain: list of the domains in your account
- Last Update: the latest date when the log was updated
- Disk Usage: the amount of the disk space the log file takes
- Linked Domains: list of the addon/parked domains

To download the archived log file, simply click on the domain in question:

Download Current Raw Access Logs

Click the domain name that corresponds to the raw access log that you want to download.

Domain	Last Update	Disk Usage	Linked Domains

Each line begins with the identity of the agent that visited your website (generally, an IP address is recorded).

Next, the date and time are logged.

Then you may see the type of HTTP request sent by the agent (usually GET or POST).

The next field is a relative path to a file/image/query and HTTP version (1.1 in the example).

A three-digit code displayed specifies the resulting status of the request: 404 – not found, 200 – success.

The next portion of logs identifies the referrer, if any - a hyphen in our example.

Although, null-referrer values are common for robots, the actual URI data is generally typical for human users.

Finally, the formal identity and credentials of the user-agent are specified.

If you wish to download archived logs which are stored in the account home directory, click on the corresponding one in the Archived Raw Logs section:

The screenshot shows a cPanel interface with a dark header bar containing the word 'DOMAINS'. Below this is a light-colored content area. In the top left of the content area, there is a heading 'Archived Raw Logs' in a large, bold, black font. Below the heading, a smaller line of text reads 'Click on a log archive to download it.' Underneath this text, there are two file names listed: 'nctest.info-Oct-2016.gz' and 'nctest.info-Nov-2016.gz'. Both file names are preceded by a small blue link icon.

If you would like to see the advanced graphical reports for the hosted domains, use the Awstats menu.

Mr. Greenspan -

Let me address your email. Your interpretation is incorrect. The logs referenced below are logs of IP addresses of visitors who visit a customers hosted website. They are in now way related to content posted by a customer; rather they allow a customer to assess the traffic / visitors their site generates.

Moreover, Namecheap fully and faithfully responds to every subpoena we receive. We take issue with the suggestion that we would misrepresent what type of data we collect. If we had the data you are seeking, we would obviously provide it.

Ms. Suarez,

The logs referenced on your support page and in your e-mail, "logs of IP addresses of visitors who visit a customers [sic] hosted website" are exactly what the subpoena requests. They are completely related to content posted by visitors (and possibly Namecheap customers as well, to the extent they visit their own sites), which is what the subpoena commands you to produce.

Your interpretation of the DMCA is also completely faulty. You are in fact required by law to have a Copyright Agent in order to maintain immunity. See 15 U.S.C. § 512(c)(2). Your designated agent is:

Service Provider: Namecheap, Inc.
4600 EAST WASHINGTON STREET
SUITE 305
PHOENIX, AZ 85034

Designated Agent: Sergio Hernandez
Namecheap Legal
4600 East Washington Street
Suite 305
Phoenix, AZ 85034
Phone: 602.613.1021
Email: legal@namecheap.com

Status: Active

Effective: December 21, 2017 to Present

Therefore, your statement that, "we are not a Copyright Agent in law or in fact" is misleading or false.

Now that you have confirmed that the information exists and is in your possession, please comply immediately.

Mr. Greenspan,

This is not accurate. The logs are IP addresses of any/all visitors who clicked onto the site. There is not a way to link any of the IP addresses or logs to an upload or to a post with your name - as directed by the subpoena. We reiterate again that the information requested in the subpoena cannot be provided.

Regarding the DMCA, we are required to designate an "agent" to receive DMCA copyright notices. Namecheap's agent for notices is who you have referenced in your email. Having a designated agent for notices is not the same as being a copyright agent. Both the statute and the listing below reflect that this person is a Designated Agent only.

Regardless, I understand from my team that you have sought to have images removed from one of the sites. I'm not sure if this is the basis for the subpoena. However, if it is, my recommendation would be the following. You could submit a DMCA Takedown Notice to us regarding the images that contain your/your family's likeness. This is a process that is expedited and does not require a court. See: <https://www.namecheap.com/legal/general/copyright-trademark-policies.aspx>. Alternatively, you may seek a court order against the customer and/or website(s) instructing the removal of content. If the order is against the entire website, it is then applied across the full site and the content must be removed regardless of who posted it. Depending on the situation, this may be a better solution.

In closing, it is not our practice nor intent to disregard a subpoena. If you decide to submit a DMCA Takedown and/or a court order against the site(s), you may direct it to us at legal@namecheap.com and we will handle it directly.

Ms. Suarez,

I'm not sure how to be any clearer, though perhaps talking on the phone could alleviate any confusion.

I have provided you with a valid federal subpoena. You are required to comply. Despite your false claims, there is, in fact, a way to "link any of the IP addresses or logs to an upload or to a post with your name". As your own support page clearly shows, Apache HTTP/HTTPS logs contain the URL of the page accessed, e.g. "GET /cgi-bin/test.py" in the example on the page (page 6 of the PDF I sent). Therefore, instead of searching for lines matching "test.py," I am asking you to search for lines that match "greenspan," and any other URL that corresponds to a page containing the term "greenspan" where "greenspan" may not be in the URL itself. The Linux commands to do that would be as follows, assuming that the site is located in /home/sites/example/html and your log file is called web.log:

grep -R greenspan /home/sites/example/html

[Compile file names of matching pages from grep results]

egrep '(greenspan|[name 1]| [name 2]| [name 3]| [...] |[name n])' web.log > greenspan.log

I expect you have sysadmin personnel who are familiar with these types of commands. Or, if these sites use WordPress, which I believe they do, you could also search the WordPress MySQL database for each site for content matching "greenspan" with SQL, and use the corresponding URLs with grep and the log files. There are therefore at least two methods to comply with the subpoena, and probably more.

These are standard types of requests for hosting providers to handle. I myself have managed Linux servers for 20 years and know how hosting platforms generally work. I also know the law (which makes this subpoena the best path to take, as opposed to further DMCA takedown requests). Based on your responses so far, it appears to me that you do not intend to comply. If this is actually the case, please let me know and I will file a motion to compel and/or a lawsuit. Generally, I'd ask that you stop wasting my time with your obstructionist nonsense.

You can reach me by phone at +1 415 670 9350 if you think that would assist in resolving this issue.

Ms. Suarez,

Correcting a typo in my prior message, the correct citation for the Designated Agent is 17 U.S.C. § 512(c)(2).

If your staff cannot handle the process of searching through log files, you are also welcome to simply send the entire visitor log for each site as a tarball and I can search through them myself for the relevant data.

Sridavi,

Nice to see that your firm is, in fact, handling this matter, despite your prior statement to the contrary.

You consented to electronic service on behalf of your client by directing me to e-mail legal@namecheap.com on July 24, 2018 at 3:46 P.M. EDT (see below). Even if you now claim that you did not, Namecheap also consented to electronic service by A) acknowledging receipt and B) discussing the subpoena, both as "legal@namecheap.com" and via its nominal general counsel, Jenn Suarez.

Our mail server confirms that the e-mail message containing the subpoena...

Additional proof would be the e-mail messages those log entries represent.

As to your false contention about the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, "Rule 45 itself does not expressly require personal in-hand service, and a practical appreciation for the fact that the obvious purpose of Rule 45(b) is to mandate effective notice to the subpoenaed party, rather than slavishly adhere to one particular type of service." Hall v. Sullivan, 229 F.R.D. 501, 505 (D. Md. 2005). Furthermore, as you surely know, electronic (e-mail) service is standard for federal cases handled via PACER and CM/ECF.

See also 17 U.S.C. § 512(h)(5), which states, "Upon receipt of the issued subpoena, either accompanying or subsequent to the receipt of a notification described in subsection (c)(3)(A), the service provider shall expeditiously disclose to the copyright owner or person authorized by the copyright owner the information required by the subpoena..." (emphasis added). Your client clearly "received" the subpoena and has been on notice since July 24, 2018.

Jenn Suarez—who does not even appear to be licensed to practice law in Nevada, and regardless of her employment status cannot possibly fulfill the strict requirements of Supreme Court of Nevada Rule 49.10 while she is also advertising "Legal" services in Nevada through Nevada-based Timbit Consulting LLC—has already admitted that the log files demanded exist. Simply claiming that I do not want those logs, when I have clearly stated that I do, will not work.

Send the logs now or I will motion for sanctions on all of you.

Mr. Greenspan,

Our firm has recently accepted representation of this matter. Please note that email service of a subpoena is appropriate if the receiving party agrees to accept service of the subpoena. Neither Namecheap nor my firm accepted service of the subpoena you forwarded to us. Discussing or even reading the subpoena does not equate with acceptance of service. Therefore, the subpoena was not properly served. However, as a courtesy, my firm will today agree to accept service of the subpoena by email. Please forward me a copy of the subpoena again.

We will need a time to prepare a response. We propose to provide you a response by August 17.

Thank you.

Ms. Suarez,

Your subpoena response in Northern District of Ohio Case No. 1:18-mc-00071 was due over an hour ago (today, August 6, 2018 at 1:00 P.M. Eastern Time).

Barring the immediate receipt of the server logs in question, I plan to instigate proceedings to have you, Sridavi Ganesan and Eugene Rome held in contempt of court.

Aaron

Sridavi,

You and your client can't wait until after the deadline has passed to suddenly pretend there's a service issue, which there never was. If you want to try to explain that to a judge, go ahead.

Nonetheless, I am willing to give you until August 10th to provide a response—namely, the logs requested—before I file my motion for sanctions. This is non-negotiable. I have a court hearing related to this matter on August 14th and my counsel needs time to prepare.

You already have the subpoena.

Mr. Greenspan,

As I mentioned, we only accepted service of the subpoena TODAY, i.e. August 7. August 10 is not enough time to provide a response, especially given that you never properly served the subpoena in the first place. As I mentioned, we will provide a response by August 17. IF you, instead, want to bring your motion for sanctions, feel free to do so. It will be denied due to improper service.

Further, PLEASE PROVIDE ME A COPY OF THE SUBPOENA.
